

ABSTRACT

An ion detector for a mass spectrometer is 5 disclosed comprising one or more microchannel plates and an anode arranged to receive electrons emitted from the one or more microchannel plates. The anode is permanently magnetised and electrons emitted from the microchannel plates preferably spiral around lines of 10 magnetic field towards the anode